

Fulfillment of 'new woman' in India is a myth.

Let's meet Malti, she starts her day at 5.00 am. She prepares breakfast and lunch for herself, her husband and children and then leaves for office. She comes back at 6 pm, attends to her children, have a cup of tea and then starts preparing dinner. Her day ends at 11 pm.

Now, Malti is a new age woman. She is educated, smart and independent. She is waiting for a promotion but there is glass ceiling at work. Her husband believes in equality but then ~~is~~ it's her responsibility to take care of children. She would like to stand in local elections but her husband doesn't allow. Her friend's 'warpanchpati' dissuades her spirit. She would like to go out at night ~~but~~ with her friends but it isn't safe. This is the story of 'new woman' of India.
